Mark Kendrick, a filmmaker since 2005 who first started his career working on the children's animated TV series 'Postman Pat', has created 100's of educational 360-degree VR Tours and Experiences that can engage children into subjects which they may usually not take an interest in.

When using a VR Headset to watch educational immersive content, children are completely immersed into the 360-degree visuals, meaning that their attention is more engaged with the content they are watching.

Mark Kendrick requires to take some behind the scenes photos and some filming to capture the reactions of children and parents while experiencing the VR Tours. This will be used as part of a research report that is being developed for discovering if technology like VR can help children to learn and retain information about subject areas on the national curriculum. We do require your consent to be filmed and feature in this case study video and report.

Register your child place now, there are only 8 x tickets per 2-hour slot, this opportunity is only for 24 children and one of their parents/relatives.
